

Tim Cotterill, better know as Frogman, was born in Leicester, England in 1950. At age fifteen, Tim dropped out of school to complete a six-year metal-directed apprenticeship. He was intrigued by metalworking he moved onto the sculpture of radical wheeled vehicles and later became interested in the design of birds and animals. In 1990, Tim moved to California and began to sell and exhibit his work all over the country. He was inspired to create his famous frog sculptures by the fun he had as a child playing with the creatures and naming them. They each have distinct personalities and character. Each frog is solid bronze with a patina and enamel overlay. Each piece is signed by the artist, and lists the edition number and size. With over one hundred sculptures created since the 1990's and new pieces created every year makes Frogman one of the top collected bronze artists in the country.
